Reference Library Access

The reference library is primarily held by the Koorie Heritage Trust for our Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander community members and researchers, to assist with research requests relating to local history and culture. If you are a community member wanting to access the library, please complete the access request form to make an appointment with one of our collection staff who will be happy to assist you.

As a not-for-profit community organisation, the Koorie Heritage Trust charges service fees for non-community members to access the reference library. These fees apply to non-Indigenous researchers, who are not working on a project in partnership with the Koorie Heritage Trust. Please see the reference library fee structure below.

Due to limited staff resources, the reference library is accessible by appointment only. The Koorie Heritage Trust does not have a paid researcher on staff, and therefore cannot assist the development of research topics, or general research enquiries not related to our Collections. To access the library please email library@korieheritagetrust.com or call 03 8662 6300 to make an enquiry and complete a research request form.

The Koorie Heritage Trust reference library holds around 4,000 items, relating to the history and culture of the Aboriginal people of South Eastern Australia. The collection includes publications by the Koorie Heritage Trust, historic books, contemporary published works, unpublished documents, theses, serials, posters, maps and some published audio-visual items.
